LAST EDITION.

BABCOCK'S TRIAL.

Magnificent Closing of Mr. Storrs' Argument.

By American Press Association to the STAR.

St. Louis, Feb. 22.--Court opened at 2 o'clock, and Mr. Storrs immediately resumed his argument for the defense. He dwelt at some length on the suspension of the order transferring supervisors, presenting the fact in a variety of ways which served to further impress on the jury the President's action in the matter, and the non-interference of General Babcock. It is a matter of no little pride, he said in substance, that we have a President who has the nerve to resist all pressure, and yet can promptly yield to the common sense logic of one trusted official like Mr. Tutton. The prosecution have arraigned President Grant for his action, claiming that he upset the plans of the Secretary of State. The evidence shows that the order rescinding the transfer was in harmony with the views of the Secretary, as he had expressed them to Mr. Tutton as the wisest course, fully vindicated by subsequent events. Mr. Storrs said he believes in parties and in party organization, but eternal truth and above and beyond all parties, all prejudice, and regardless of party affiliations and predilections. None can fail to see that both the President and Gen. Babcock are without spot and without blemish in the matter. There are no more flowers of rhetoric in the President's deposition than in the deposition of the President. He is eloquent in his terse, incisive language, in its inherent and unimpeachable truthfulness. The Chief Magistrate is a plain man, using the plain language of plain truth, and he only broke his silence on this subject out of respect to the law, the majesty of which he respects. The bushels of telegrams paraded by the prosecution have divided into three, from which, with all their ingenuity, they had alone been able to misinterpret as injurious to the defendant. Mr. Storrs paid his compliments also to Everett and Fitzroy. The former, he said, paid daily allegiance to the god of lies. This was his trade, without variances or shadow of turning. The manner he employed to swindle the disbelievers into a belief that they had backing at the White House by showing letters and dispatches, was amusingly exploded. When this failed as a result he employed the desperate farce of juggling with those two letters, so that Everett should tell the disbelievers. McGill's testimony had ruined all that, and notwithstanding every effort by the prosecution to bring in witnesses to impeach McGill they had signally failed to do so. The closing of Mr. Storrs' argument was as follows: I have said to you as yet nothing as to the character or reputation of my client. It is splendid, and he ought to have been known of it. For those men who have known him in the long years past, men whom we have all delighted to honor, have come here, and with one accord given him a reputation that I am sure every man upon this jury earnestly hopes and prays that his son may have in the future--spotless, without stain or blemish. Gentlemen, if with you we give it to you, we leave it with you; we give it to you, trusting and believing that it will be entirely safe in your hands; and that you will preserve it sacredly until this trial has closed. I have no considerations of mere appeal; but this has been a long trial and dreadful trial. Never since it has been my privilege to appear in courts of justice have I felt in my heart as I feel now, a tremendous feeling of responsibility as rests on me to-day. It was but a few weeks since that I left the quiet home in which my client lives. I saw his children gather in prayer about their mother's knee. I saw the patient and calm course of the wife, and to-day it seems to me the veil of distance that spreads between us is lifted, and I see her tearful eyes gazing wistfully after and praying to you, gentlemen, in the name of the good God who presides above us all, that her husband may come back a saved and vindicated man. I see the children of that home as they gather again around their mother's knee, sending forth the same quiet prayer that their father may be saved, and when this defendant goes back to his home he shall walk the streets of the city where he has done so much to beautify, a free and thoroughly vindicated man. Gentlemen, thanking you from the bottom of my heart for the patient attention you have given me, and invoking divine blessings upon you in the consideration which you shall in future give to this case, I leave it confidently with you.

Mr. Storrs closed his eloquent plea at 3:45 o'clock, and received the most flattering congratulations for his brilliant and powerful effort, to every word of which the Judge and jury and a large audience paid the closest attention.

His effect on the jury their verdict will show. Judge Dillon is suffering from a severe cold, and so without waiting for the commencement of the next argument the Court adjourned till 10 o'clock this morning, at which hour Ex-Judge Porter will begin the closing plea for the defendant.

A common opinion expressed here is that if there is not a disagreement of the jury the verdict will be for acquittal.

NEW YORK.

Thomassen's Antecedents--The French Elections--Centennial Rifle Shooting.

By American Press Association to the STAR.

New York, Feb. 22.--The Consul General of Germany, in this city, has completed his final report of the antecedents of Thomassen, the dynamite fiend, in this country.

It shows him to be a British subject and a swindler, well known in this country under various aliases.

The report will be sent in a few days to Berlin for transmission to the Criminal Court at Bremerhaven.

It contains many interesting facts about his sojourn in St. Louis, and shows him to have been a thoroughly unscrupulous man.

A cable special from Paris says the Republican triumph in the Assembly elections is more complete than the most sanguine Republican partisans expected.

The Executive Committee of the National Rifle Association and Amateur Rifle Club have resolved, in view of the want of proper range and manifold other difficulties connected with the shooting of Centennial rifle matches at Philadelphia, that such matches be shot on the range of Creedmoor, Long Island.

WASHINGTON.

The Alaska Commercial Company--That Quarrel with the President.

By American Press Association to the STAR.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 22.--Gen. Miller, President of the Alaska Commercial Company, arrived in this city from San Francisco yesterday, and says the object of the visit is to demand a full and complete investigation of the affairs of the company.

There is a rumor in political circles of a sharp passage of words recently between President Grant and Solicitor Buford Wilson.

The latter has had a great deal to do with the framing of the indictments in the whisky case.

Shortly after Babcock's trial began he called on the President, and the story goes that he made the remark which offended the President, when the latter in the course of some other remarks is reported to have expressed himself as highly offended.

This conversation was, it is asserted, reported to Bristow at once, and Wilson is alleged to have visited the President and not seen how he could do otherwise than resign.

At once Bristow, it is reported, requested the Solicitor not to be hasty, and intimated that if he would wait until the whisky trials were over he would very likely have company in retiring from office.

FOREIGN.

By American Press Association to the STAR.

ENGLISH STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, Feb. 22.--The Times' money article to-day says in U. S. railway bonds there is but little animation. Speculative shares are weak. Canadian railroad bonds are weak.

FRENCH POLITICS.

PARIS, Feb. 22.--The elections have resulted as follows: Republicans, 234; Monarchists, 61; Bonapartists, 55; doubtful, 97.

The Republican triumph is secure. The Ministry has resigned, and Dufrance is forming a new Cabinet.

ANOTHER RELIGIOUS EXCITEMENT.

QUEBEC, Feb. 22.--Great excitement exists here, among the Protestants, over the fact that Father O'Connor, a Catholic priest, is alleged to have visited the national schools and there vented a tirade against Protestantism. A formal letter has been sent to the Bishop on the matter.

THE DEMORALIZED CARLISTS.

LONDON, Feb. 22.--The forces of Don Carlos are completely demoralized, and offer but feeble resistance to the attacks of the Royalists. His leaders are scattering and many of the commands disbanding.

THE ADVISORY COUNCIL.

By American Press Association to the STAR.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 22.--The Advisory Council remained in secret session yesterday afternoon for three hours. Nothing very definite is known of its proceedings, but it is generally understood that it was resolved to sustain the course of Plymouth Church in dropping the names of Brown and Mrs. Moulton. Mr. F. D. Moulton has sent a letter to Dr. Bacon, asking an opportunity of showing Mr. Beecher's guilt, if it is within the province of the Council to go into that question.

Indiana Republicans.

By American Press Association to the STAR.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 22.--Hon. Godlove S. Orth was to-day nominated for Governor on the first ballot.

Gen. Ben. Harrison and Gen. Thos. A. Nelson are electors at large. R. W. Thompson, Will. Cumback, Jas. Tyner and Thos. M. Browne are delegates to the National Convention of the State at Large. A resolution was passed endorsing in very strong terms Mr. Morton for the Presidency.

Shot by a Former Lover.

By American Press Association to the STAR.

DETROIT, Feb. 22.--Amelia, Foster, a beautiful young lady residing near here, was shot dead by Weston Parks, a former lover, Sunday night, as she was coming from church in company with Parks' rival.

Mentioned in Brief.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.--B. Tilt & Son's silk house have made an assignment.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 22.--The Republican State Convention will be held in Syracuse March 22.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.--The failure of Wellington, Kidder & Co., Broad-street whisky rectifiers, is announced.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 22.--The Advisory Council of Plymouth Church met in secret session this morning, but nothing was made known, if any business was done.

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.--Shortly after midnight last night, Gen. Cameron entered a State street saloon, drew a revolver and shot Fred, Schreder, who was standing at the bar and then killed himself. No reason for the act is surmised.

BOSTON, Feb. 22.--Two persons, Rev. Mr. Alger, of South Natick, and Sabin Smith, of Somerville, were fatally injured this morning, while going to the celebration, by the overturning of a wagon. Other occupants received less serious injuries.

FLASHES.

J. W. Barker & Co., Syracuse millers, have assigned.

Monroe, Michigan, felt the shock of an earthquake last evening.

Governor Hendricks, of Indiana, leaves to-day for New Orleans.

The Sioux Indians are threatening the white miners in the neighborhood of Fort Pease, on the Upper Yellowstone.

Mr. H. C. Jewell has been appointed Chief of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing of the Treasury Department, to succeed George B. McCartee.

The Mississippi Senate yesterday opened the impeachment trial of Davis, the colored Lieutenant-Governor. Five negroes were called upon him this morning.

General Crook, accompanied by a force of cavalry, left Cheyenne yesterday for Fort Pease, where the Government is now massing a large number of troops, looking, it is supposed, to protecting Black Hills emigrants.

The Conference Committees of the Iron and Puddlers' Associations of Pittsburgh met last night, and agreed to continue their compromise price of the steel before a week longer before fixing upon permanent rates to pay for labor.

The Mississippi Love Committee will report unanimously in favor of an appropriation of from three to five million dollars, in the shape of refunding a portion of the cotton tax illegally collected from the States to be directly benefited by the construction of levees.

Kennedy, who was charged with the murder of Marcus Louis at Holy Springs last week, by chopping him to pieces with an ax, was arrested yesterday at that place. He says the negroes attacked and committed the murder and afterward smeared his clothes with blood. This.

A Brute Learns a Lesson.

The other night, at a late hour, a horse started from the new post-office to run up town through one of the east side avenues. The man who starts the cars, that is the fellow located down-town, who with a little whistle signals the drivers when to go--got aboard this particular car to go home. In the car were a young friend of mine, an aged gentleman, and a little ragged newsboy with a few papers in his hand. The burly starter no longer saw the game that he seized him by the collar and threw him out of the door with such force that the little chap fell heavily against the railing, and began to cry bitterly. At this the aged gentleman rose and said: "That was a very mean thing for you to do."

The starter brutally said: "I guess I can attend to my own business without your troubling yourself."

The old man replied rather severely: "But it was the act of a coward, sir."

"I'll coward you," said the bully whereupon the old gentleman said, "Go in." Here my young friend rose, and began to put in a word; but the old man bowed and said, "I'm very much obliged to you, sir; but I am arguing this case, if you please."

At this he slapped the starter over the cheek so that the blow sounded like a torpedo exploding. The starter was about to square off when the old laddie hit him have a stinger on the other cheek. The brute now began to back toward the door, the old man following him up and dealing slap after slap over eyes and ears. When the starter got outside he cried out to the old man, who had quietly sat down: "Come out here and I'll give you a chance."

The old man calmly said, "You big bully, I should come out there you would have teeth enough to eat your supper with. I'd knock 'em down your infernal throat. So don't say any more."

The starter got up and took another at the old man. Then the old man turned to my friend and said: "I'm very much obliged to you, sir, for your offer of assistance; but I didn't need it, sir; really didn't need it. You see (here he cast his eye down, as if his clean, patriarchal appearance might belie him), I was once just a little rough myself--just a mite rough, you know. I could put up the dukes in my day, I confess. I was rough, rough--but sir, I never hit a child in my life. No, sir, nor allowed anybody else to hit a child in my presence." [New York Letter.]

Winslow is beginning to think it would have been $5 in his pocket if he had never been born.

COMMISSIONER HALLIDAY.

He is Accused of Corruption in Office--The Charges and Halliday's Reply Thereto.

August Kuchenmeister, a keeper of a saloon at No. 84 Twelfth street, who was arrested last July for passing a counterfeit $5 bill, indicted and tried, but found not guilty, comes to the front now with a damaging statement in reference to U. S. Commissioner Franklin Halliday, before whom he was tried.

His statement in brief is that after he had been released on bail Casper Westmeier promised to help him out of his trouble. A short time after Westmeier said that if Kuchenmeister would pay him $300 he could fix it all up with Halliday, and the case would not go before the Grand Jury. At his second hearing Kuchenmeister was bound over to the Grand Jury, and becoming alarmed he went with his friend to call on Westmeier at his saloon. At this time he stated that it could still be settled for $200. One hundred of this was paid and Kuchenmeister got a receipt for it. He saw from behind some carriages on Vine street Westmeier taking the money and depart in company with Halliday. A short time after they joined Kuchenmeister in a saloon.

Halliday looked pleased and treated to beer. Westmeier said the other $100 could be paid by building him a kitchen and furnishing him cigars. Kuchenmeister thought that the whole matter was settled until he saw in the newspapers that he had been indicted. He then went to see about it, and Westmeier said that Halliday had put the papers away, but somebody had stolen them from his safe, and the case had been thus brought before the Grand Jury. Halliday still kept coming to his saloon, and one day Kuchenmeister asked him, in the presence of ten men, "Why did my case come before the Grand Jury when I paid you $300 to get away with the papers?" Halliday replied that he got but $20. Kuchenmeister says that he is going to sue Halliday for $700 which he has lost through him.

George Stoppelkamp stated that Westmeier had several times visited him and endeavored to get $500 from him to prevent prosecution, but not having the money it was not furnished.

COMMISSIONER HALLIDAY'S STATEMENT.

In reference to the above charges United States Commissioner Franklin Halliday spoke as follows to a STAR reporter who called upon him this morning: "Now Kuchenmeister says that when his first examination came he had the case continued at a cost of $27, which he paid to me. The case was continued the second time on application of Kuchenmeister. He did not pay the $27, but only about $13. He paid that to me, and I paid it out to witnesses who were granted to him this morning. In regard to Kuchenmeister's statement that Westmeier promised him to see me and have the thing straightened up, I don't know anything. Nothing was said to me by Westmeier about fixing it up, only this: Westmeier came to me one day and said, 'I want you to be as lenient on Kuchenmeister as you can, for he is a friend of mine.' I replied, 'If he is not guilty, I shall of course discharge him, but if guilty I would have to hold him over.' He came, I think, once after this, and I told him the same thing. He never fixed up any cases with me, as he says he has; never in God's kingdom. What he says about John Berger, a jobber dealer, that he could fix Kuchenmeister's case, I don't know anything about. I don't know John Berger. Now, here is another statement which is not correct. Kuchenmeister says I asked if he didn't want his case continued again? I say that is false in every particular. And about that statement of Kuchenmeister's that Westmeier would arrange with me to make way with the papers in his case, I don't know of course what Westmeier said to him, but this I do know, that he never came to me with any such proposition. As to Kuchenmeister's statement that he had been indicted and saw me re-appear on a bill from Westmeier, on Vine street, two doors from the corner, I will say that it is false as false can be. I never received a cent from him, except a little cost bill, about a dollar and half in all, and this amount was not paid me at that time, but at his (Kuchenmeister's) saloon one day, when I happened to drop in to see him, being in that part of town. I see further that Westmeier states that he had said to him that the papers in Kuchenmeister's case had been stolen from my safe. Now, for one thing, I have no safe. All the papers that there were in the case was the transcript, which was sent to the Clerk of the United States Court, where they now are. Another John Kuchenmeister's statement is that I drank of his beer without paying for it. I never did anything of the kind. All his statements are lies from beginning to end."
